Dennis DeVaux of Thetford Center, Vt., has been crowned the Grand American Handicap Champion at the 103rd Grand American World Trapshooting Championships at Vandalia, Ohio.

DeVaux broke 100 consecutive clay targets in the top event at the Grand, then beat two other 100-straight gunners in a shoot-off to win shotgunning's most treasured annual title. The Grand events concluded last weekend.

Robb Harper of Jamestown, Ohio, was runner-up and Keith Ditto of Brandenburg, Ky., was third after the shootoff.

The Grand American draws more than 5,000 trapshooters from around the world and is shooting's largest event, drawing some 100,000 spectators.

Plans are progressing to move the ATA and the Grand to a new, 1,300-acre site at Sparta, Ill., in time for the 2004 tournament, according to the ATA Web site, www.shootata.com.
